answers

Use your atlas to help you label the world map with the seven continents, five oceans, equator, and northern and southern hemispheres.
Use the word bank to help you if you need it.

blue boxes = oceans green boxes = continents red boxes = invisible lines/areas

Challenge: Why do you think geographers split the world into hemispheres? Discuss with your partner.

Geographers split the world into hemispheres to make it easier to describe and compare places. It helps us explain where countries are and understand differences in climate, for example, why places near the equator are hotter.
